Safeguarding Adults: Information for families/carers

This advice leaflet has been provided as part of Halton Safeguarding Adults Board commitment to Safeguarding Adults. It complies with the Care Act 2014, which is underpinned by six principles for safeguarding adults. Safeguarding means protecting a person's right to live safely, free from abuse and neglect. It is also about helping people to be aware of their rights, protecting adults at risk of harm and preventing and stopping abuse from happening.

When a concern of abuse or neglect is reported Halton Safeguarding Adults Board has a legal duty under The Care Act 2014 to ensure enquiries are made where the adult is at risk. If the adult does not meet the criteria, signposting and support services which can help the person will be provided.

Adult at risk:

An adult at risk is anyone aged 18 years or over who:

- has care and support needs (whether or not those needs are met) and
- is experiencing, or is at risk of, abuse or neglect and
- is unable to protect themselves because of their care and support needs

Six principles of Adult Safeguarding:

Empowerment: People are supported and encouraged to make their own decisions and informed consent

Prevention: it is better to take action before harm

Proportionality: the least intrusive response appropriate to the risk presented

Protection: support and representation for those in greatest need

Partnership: services offer local solutions through working closely with their communities. Communities have a part to play in preventing, detecting and reporting neglect and abuse

Accountability: accountability and transparency in delivering safeguarding

What happens when abuse is reported?

Adult Social Care have a duty to respond to any claims of abuse, as we must assess the needs of any adult at risk who may need care, support and protection. Abuse can take many forms, such as physical, financial / material, sexual, psychological / emotional, neglect / acts of omission, discriminatory, organisational abuse, domestic violence or abuse, self-neglect or modern slavery. It may be intentional or unintentional, and can happen anywhere.

- It is important that we record the details of the claim as soon as possible.
- We then have to consider the urgency and seriousness of the alleged abuse; this includes reviewing our files on the adult at risk concerned.
- We will speak to people who know the adult at risk, including those involved in their care and support, such as doctors, nurses, family and other carers.
- We have a duty to liaise with police. The Police and Adult Social Care usually investigate serious allegations together.

- We will make contact with the adult at risk and discuss the information we have received.
- We will share information with appropriate, identified individuals. This may include family members and other carers, depending on the circumstances.
- Adult Social Care will always investigate an allegation of abuse of an adult at risk, unless it is an allegation of criminal activity, in which case it will be referred to the Police.
- The adult at risk will always be kept informed, and will be part of the decision making process at all times.
- An advocacy service will be sought where this is needed.
- During the course of any inquiries and investigation, various meetings will be held. Some of these will involve professionals only. For those that lead to a case conference or review, you and/or the adult at risk will be invited, and in this case, the worker involved will explain the process to you in advance. Anyone who visits you or the adult at risk will carry an identification card.

How long will the process take?

Some adult abuse investigations may be concluded quite quickly, whereas others may be lengthy and more complex. Appropriate people will be kept informed as the investigation progresses and at its conclusion. If you have any questions or concerns, at any time during the process, please talk to the social work team involved (please see contact details at the end of this leaflet).

What about support for the family?
